

FIFTY-POUND BABY SHOCKS POLICEMAN

Sure Man Who Announced Its Birth Should Be Sent to Bellevue.

BUT IT WAS A FACT.

Mrs. Murphy Had Added a New Hippopotamus to the Central Park Zoo.

Fifty pounds of baby came to a house with iron bars in front of it up in the aristocratic neighborhood of Sixty-fourth street and Fifth avenue today, and the rejoicings were in proportion to the avoidings of trouble brought by the biggest and huskiest stork that could be put on the job.

Bill Snyder was seen in the dim gray dawn to rush up to the policeman on post and say:

"Tell, it's happened!"

"What?" asked the cop, who was new on post and thought in the wild-eyed young man he had a lunatic to deal with.

"Why, the baby, the—the—"

"Oh," said the new cop, a pleasant natured young man who knew the right thing to say and recognized the symptoms.

"How much does it weigh?"

"Fifty pounds," was the reply, in tones of hysterical joy.

"Fifty pounds!" The new policeman's arm shot out and he grabbed Snyder's right wrist in a grip of steel. "Just come and tell that to the sergeant," he said.

"I must humor him," thought the policeman, recollecting General Hummer's last words. "That's just the kind, but don't let him go into your lady's room in the big house, so."

"Where child is he?" asked the sergeant, looking toward the Arsenal police station in the Central Park Zoo.

"Why, Mrs. Murphy's," replied Snyder, not without a touch of the excitement of the moment that he was being hurried before the sergeant's desk.

"Sergeant," said a lady, says Mrs. Murphy's baby and it weighs fifty pounds," announced the new policeman.

"Believe me," murmured the sergeant, without looking up from his wrist.

"Sergeant, it's me! Bill Snyder, of the Zoo!" cried Mrs. Murphy's, the hippopotamus, suddenly realizing that he was in distress.

Then a great light broke on them all and it was a pity that the father of the city's new fifty-pound baby was not there to see the joy and initial congratulations.

WOMAN TRIED STUSS. LOST, CAUSED ARREST.

Didn't Know the Game, but Put "Five on the King" and Said "Swindle."

Charged by Mrs. Mary Strauss, of No. 26 Sixth street, with having taken $20 and two diamond rings from her in a Forty street "stuss" game, Joseph Cohen, of No. 71 Essex street, was discharged today for want of evidence by Magistrate Corrigan in Jefferson Market Court.

"I had never played the game before," Mrs. Strauss told the Court, "and he told me it was easy. I put $5 on the king, just to see, and won. Then I became interested and soon I began to lose, and he said to me, 'You're not playing it over and over and I had been ruined.'"

After Strauss and an corporation of her story, Cohen denied absolutely that he should not be called upon to play the game, and said with a smile:

"I believe it's a woman's story," said Magistrate Corrigan, "but under the law I can't hold you."

HUNDREDS BACK AT WORK AS CEMENT PLANTS REOPEN

SANDUSKY, O., March 6.—To meet demands of increasing orders, indicative of general resumption of building operations, the plant of the Sandusky Portland Cement Company, at Bay Ridge, resumed work today with a full force.

Several hundred men are affected. The plant was closed early in December, owing to the financial stringency. It is understood that other plants of the same company at Syracuse, Ind., and Dixon, Ill., will start up within a week.

The Castalia Portland Cement Company's plant at Castalia, Ohio, also reopened today.

BANK ROBBERS KILL WATCHMAN AND ESCAPE.

DENVER, March 6.—Dell Ellis, night watchman at Brighton, eighteen miles north of Denver, on the Union Pacific Railroad, was shot and killed early today by one of three robbers whom he surprised attempting to enter the Farmers' State Bank and the post office. The robbers escaped on a freight train.

FATHER AND SON DEAD FROM ACID

Another Child in Serious Condition and Parent Supposed to Have Given Poison.

WATERBURY, Conn., March 6.—Monetti Montreza, a well-known local musician, and his young son, William, died today as a result of taking carbolic acid and a six-year-old daughter was found nearly dead from the same cause.

The musician had been dependent of late, and it is thought that he administered the acid to his children and then took his own life.

The discovery of the two dead bodies was made by another daughter on her return from school.
